PREFACE

THE present volume of the AMERICAN CATALOGUE, being the fifth issue and sixth volume in the series, continues the record of the original AMERICAN CATALOGUE of 1876, covering in two volumes the books in print at that date, and the successive volumes, covering the three periods 1876–84, 1884–90, and 1890–95. This brings the enterprise, founded by Frederick Leypoldt, to the century year and concludes the series on the present plan of cataloguing. Some work has been done toward the proposed volume covering the publications of the earlier part of the century, not in print in 1876, which would complete the record of the period 1800–1900 and make more possible the issue of a general catalogue for the nineteenth century, if that should ever be pecuniarily practicable. The encouragement to historical bibliography in this country is not, however, adequate to ensure the publication either of the earlier volume or of the comprehensive work, and the issue of either will depend upon future circumstances.

The period of the present volume covers four and a half years, from July 1, 1895, to January 1, 1900. It seemed preferable to close the record in its present form with the imprint year 1899, except in the case of books bearing the imprint 1900 but actually published within 1899. While a record of the nineteenth century should properly include books of 1900 and exclude books of 1800, it seems better to make the bibliographical century co-terminous with the figures 18[00]—except as above stated, where books of 1900 imprint were really of 1899 issue—and to begin the new series for the twentieth century with the 1900 imprint proper. The increase of book publishing in the United States is evident from the fact that, although the period is half a year shorter than that of the previous volume, the author-and-title alphabet covers 559 pages, as against 499 pages, and the subject alphabet 301 pages, as against 251 pages, in the previous five years. The present volume includes, approximately, 27,500 books and 35,000 entries (author-and-title alphabet) for the four and a half years, as against 25,000 books and 32,000 entries for the previous five years. The present record is, like the previous supplementary volumes, based on the weekly record of the "Publishers' Weekly," whose bibliographical machinery has been improved from year to year, which record is repeated in full in the successive volumes of the Annual Catalogue. The volume includes, however, entries additional to that record as well as books of 1899 imprint which were recorded in the "Publishers' Weekly" after January 1, 1900. The ideal of bibliographical completeness is never achieved, and the editor and compilers are fully sensible of the omissions and defects in the present work. During the period an increasing use has been made from year to year of the copyright entries recorded in the weekly "Copyright Bulletin," the information from which is verified and completed by a post-card addressed in each case to the publisher. Many publishers have cordially and fully responded to these and other requests to supply data, while others have been so derelict as to make it difficult to be assured of exact or complete information. The invitation to publishers to co-operate in making this American bibliographical system complete and adequate is urgently repeated.

The present volume, like its predecessors, follows essentially the plan of the original AMERICAN CATALOGUE. The first alphabet contains the entry under author's name and an entry under first word of title in the case of novels, juveniles, plays and poems, and of other works whose title is not essentially a subject-title. The second alphabet contains the entry under specific subject—novels, juveniles, plays, poems, etc., of course excepted. These two alphabets have been paged separately and duplicate title-pages furnished, so that the work may be bound either as one volume or two, according to the subscriber's individual pleasure and convenience. The CATALOGUE embraces reprints, importations in editions, and the law reports of the United States and State courts. It has not been attempted to include local directories, periodicals, musical scores, books chiefly blank, unbound maps, tracts, and other low-priced pamphlets. For this and other reasons the statistics of annual publication and the aggregate statistics for the present period do not closely correspond with the copyright records.

The methods of entry are detailed in the notes facing each alphabet. The entries, as in the original AMERICAN CATALOGUE, are generally in conformity with American bibliographical custom, following, as far as possible, the rules of the American Library Association. The size has been given in exact letters, instead of the indefinite numbers, so far as practicable. The main entry should be sought under the author's name, or, in the case of anonymous books, under first word of title, the other title entries and the subject entries being more abridged.

Publishers are given according to the imprint entry, even in cases where another publisher has taken over the books later. In this case the name of the later publisher is usually bracketed, and the bracketed publisher is the one to whom application should be made for the book. In respect to series, the publishers have in many cases changed the numbering of volumes in later issues, which explains many discrepancies that may be found. The Annual Catalogues of each year give the full titles from which the abbreviated entries of the AMERICAN CATALOGUE are made, in most cases with full descriptive notes; but the title is not always found in the Annual Catalogue of the year of imprint. For instance, "Christmas books" usually bear imprint of the following year and many books come to light at the beginning of each year that were issued during the crowded season of the year preceding. Thus books with the 1900 imprint may be found in the 1899 Annual Catalogue and other books with the 1899 imprint in the 1900 Annual Catalogue. When bracketed date follows imprint date it indicates the year of actual publication, and also the Annual Catalogue in which the record will be found.

The arrangement in the subject volume is by specific subjects, not by general classes. Books upon kindred topics are not grouped under a general heading, but each is placed under the particular subject of which it treats. There are many cases of books with obscure, ambiguous, or meaningless titles, for which it has been impossible, in the absence of the books themselves, to determine with certainty their specific subjects; they have been placed under general subjects where these were evident, but in some instances there have doubtless been mistakes, and perhaps ludicrous mistakes. It has not been practicable, in all cases, to await publishers' replies to specific questions as to such books. The editor will be glad to receive any corrections in this as well as in other respects. The user of the subject alphabet should remember, in general, that by reference to a more general heading he will often find what might otherwise escape him on the specific subject or kindred topics. In searching for books on specific subjects, the ever-increasing bibliographic aids should be consulted by the student.

The present volume does not include appendixes covering Government and State publications and the publications of Societies, such as have been features of previous volumes. This is for two reasons: first, that the expense and delay incident to these appendixes, with the growth of publications in these fields as well as in the general field, have made their inclusion impossible within the limits of income for the CATALOGUE; and, second, that provision has been otherwise made for these features. The Government itself now issues adequate catalogues through the office of the Superintendent of Documents; a separate bibliography of State publications, inclusive of most of the period of the present volume, is in course of publication from the "Publishers' Weekly" office, and a bibliography of the publications of Societies, also covering most of the period of the present volume, has already been issued, both these being a labor of love on the part of the present editor.

The list of publishers, which precedes the first alphabet, will be found useful as a directory of American publishers during the period, and as a brief history of the changes during these years; it numbers 1666 names, an increase of 17 over the list of 1890–1895. It is still true that nine-tenths of American publishing, however, is done by less than one-tenth of this number. In the large cities street addresses (the latest) are given so far as possible, and where no addresses are given it is because most careful inquiry, through the postal authorities and otherwise, has failed to give trace. The name on the title-page of a book is the one always given in the CATALOGUE; changes of firm are traced as far as practicable in the prefatory list. Many entered as publishers are, of course, State or other printers or authors printing only their own books.

The present volume has been under the charge of Miss Frances B. Hawley, a graduate of the Pratt Institute Library School, as assistant editor; upon her fidelity, bibliographical knowledge, and ability the editor has largely relied for the practical handling of the work, under his general direction, and to her should be given much of any credit in the result. The chief assistant in compiling has been Miss Elsie Adams; Miss M. V. Titus and Miss E. M. Randall have also assisted in this part of the task. For the first time it has been impracticable for the present writer to read in detail the page proofs, and he acknowledges his special indebtedness to Mrs. Augusta H. Leypoldt for this work and for other valued co-operation throughout the preparation of the present volume. Miss Helen E. Haines, the assistant editor of the previous volume, has also co-operated, though to less extent, in the preparation of the present one. Acknowledgment is also due to Miss Marian M. Monachesi, the bibliographical editor of the "Publishers' Weekly," and her assistant, Miss A. L. Allen, since upon their work the record is based. Miss S. E. Parsons, also of the "Publishers' Weekly" staff, has been directly responsible for the list of publishers, and has done, with painstaking accuracy, much of the transcription of titles. Mr. A. C. Potter, of Harvard University Library, has been of great assistance in supplying titles of subscription books which are apt to escape ordinary bibliographical record. Acknowledgment is due to the Kay Printing House, and particularly to Mr. R. J. Harrison, in immediate charge, for the typographical work on the volume.

The editor will be glad to have sent to him, at the "Publishers' Weekly" office, notes of omissions or errors in this or previous volumes of the AMERICAN CATALOGUE, which will be properly filed for future use.

The present volume, as has been stated, completes the great series of bibliographical records originated in 1876 by Frederick Leypoldt, whose name will always be held in honored remembrance by the student of American bibliography. The time has now come, with the year 1900, for the adoption of a different system, for which the development of the linotype has given special opportunity. The bibliographical system of the "Publishers' Weekly" office has been carefully revised and extended, commencing with the year 1900, and the five-yearly AMERICAN CATALOGUE as now planned will utilize not only its bibliographical material but the actual printing record made from week to week and month to month. The weekly record of the "Publishers' Weekly," including the descriptive notes, will, as heretofore, form the first alphabet of the Annual Catalogue, and will hereafter, without the descriptive notes, form in a single alphabet the first portion of the five-yearly AMERICAN CATALOGUE. The monthly index, which gives in one alphabet the author- title- subject- and series-entry by short title, is repeated cumulatively in each succeeding month in the "Publishers' Weekly," and at the end of the twelve months forms in the consolidated alphabet the second part of the Annual Catalogue; the alphabets for the five years will finally be cumulated, to form the second portion of the five-yearly AMERICAN CATALOGUE. From any of these records more full information can be traced back to the preceding sources or to the publishers' catalogues in the "Trade List Annual." The standard "Publishers' Weekly" page and "Publishers' Weekly" volume will thus become the standard of the five-yearly AMERICAN CATALOGUE, in more convenient shape than the present somewhat cumbrous form, which was originally adopted for reasons then and since fully justifying the choice.

The editor hopes that the new plan for American trade bibliography will form a comprehensive and satisfactory basis for the bibliography of the twentieth century, which must be completed by those who are to come after, and whose privileges and opportunities will doubtless be as much beyond those of present workers as theirs are beyond their predecessors of a hundred years ago.

NOTE ON AUTHOR-AND-TITLE ENTRIES

Imprint entries.—Full entries are given under names of authors when known,—under initials or pseudonyms when the real names have not been ascertained,—under names of editors of collections,—and under governments and names of societies. The order in such full entries is: author; actual title; edition; date of publication; date of copyright, when other than that of publication; number of volumes, if more than one; illustrations; size, indicated by letters whenever the book has been seen by the cataloguer; name of series; binding, if other than cloth; price; and name of publisher, abbreviated as shown in the list of publishers which prefaces this work. Anonymous works and composite books where the editor is not known, are entered under the first word of the title not an article; translations, under the author of the original work. The works of noblemen are entered under title of rank, unless the family name is better known. The works of married women, and of others who have changed their names, are given under the last known form which they have used in their works, but in a few cases the better known maiden name or pseudonym has been retained, with a cross-reference from the present or true name. In authors' names honorary degrees are omitted unless these are needed to distinguish different authors of the same name. Initials and pseudonyms when used as headings are treated as real names, the last being placed first: as B., E. V. —Eliot, George.

English compound names are usually entered under the last part of the name; foreign ones under the first part. French and English names beginning with a prefix (excepting the French de or d') are entered under the prefix; in all other languages (and in the case of the French de or d') they are entered under the part of the name following the prefix. The German diphthongs, ä, ö, ü, are so spelt (excepting when like Goethe, the author himself used ae, oe, ue) and are arranged as a, o, u. In general, the vernacular usage of the language is followed; in doubtful cases cross-references indicate the proper heading.

Transactions, journals, reports, and collections of a society are entered under its name, works by individual members, although published by the society, are placed under names of authors. Church constitutions, hymn-books, liturgies, prayer-books, etc., when official, appear under the name of the church society, otherwise under the title; individual churches under the name of the place.

Under "Bible" the entries in the author alphabet include only the text, with or without notes; commentaries are entered under the names of the commentators. In the subject alphabet all works relating to the Bible are grouped under that heading with subdivisions. In the case of law books, laws, proceedings, reports, etc., are entered under the name of the country or state, unless covering more than one, with reference from name of compiler; but handbooks, guides, manuals, and forms are generally entered under compiler.

Reference (Title) entries.—Novels, juveniles, plays, and other popular books having characteristic titles, are also entered in brief under the first word of the title not an article.

Series.—Books published in series are entered under the name of editor, when that is known, with individual titles as contents, and a reference from the title of the series. When sold separately the volumes are also entered fully under the names of individual authors. With long series of fiction or miscellaneous works it has been deemed sufficient to give an entry under the general name of the series with the number of volumes published during the period covered by the catalogue, and entry under author and title of each work contained in the series. For earlier issues of the series former catalogues should be consulted.

Where there are several editions of the same work, the arrangement is not by the name of the edition, but by the alphabetical order of the names of the publishers.

Books published between July 1, 1895–January 1, 1900, but now known to be out of print, are entered in the catalogue with the abbreviation (o. p.) following the price.

A single dash indicates the repetition of the preceding heading (author or title); two dashes indicate the repetition of the preceding double heading as two joint authors, or of the preceding main and subordinate headings. A shorter dash between prices indicates various prices and bindings ranging between those given. Dates of publication separated by a dash are the years of publication of the first and last volumes of the work or series.

Brackets after a proper name enclose the real name of a pseudonymous writer, the family name of a nobleman, the present name of an authoress better known by a former name, the pseudonym (in quotation marks) of a writer entered under real name. Brackets are also used to designate what does not appear on the title-page of the book. The date is enclosed in brackets when it is not on the title-page, but is inferred from the time of record or other data.

Books which have not appeared in the Annual Catalogues are starred after imprint date. A superior figure after imprint date indicates the Annual Catalogue in which the record will be found, instead of the Annual of the imprint year.

Abbreviations are usually self-explanatory, and follow as a rule the recommendations of the American Library Association [Library Journal, March, 1878]. A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: (Augustus, August); B: (Benjamin); C: (Charles); D: (David); E: (Edward); F: (Frederic); G: (George); H: (Henry); I: (Isaac); J: (John); K: (Karl); L: (Louis); M: (Mark); N: (Nicholas); O: (Otto); P: (Peter); R: (Richard); S: (Samuel); T: (Thomas); U: (Ulrich); V: (Victor); W: (William). The following abbreviations are also used: Caro. (Caroline); Cath. (Catharine); Ctte. (Charlotte); Eliz. (Elizabeth); Fes. (Frances); Ha. (Hannah); Ht. (Harriet); Marg. (Margaret); Ma. (Mary); Reb. (Rebecca); Sa. (Sarah).

The less evident abbreviations are: adpt. (adapted), anc.(ient), ann.(ual), annot.(ated), app.(endix), arr.(anged), bibliog.(raphy), c. (copyright), col.(ored), coll.(ections or collected), comp.(iled or compiler), conc.(erning), cont.(ents or containing), corr.(ected), del.(ivered), descrip.(tion), disc.(overy), doc.(ument), ed.(ition or editor or edited), embr.(acing), eng.(raving or engraved), enl.(arged), expl.(ained or explanation), for.(eign), il.(lustrations or illustrated), incl.(uding), lang.(uage), lib.(rary), lit.(erature), mod.(ern), narr.(ative), nat.(ional or natural), o. p. (out of print), pap.(er), pop.(ular), por.(trait), pref.(ace), prep.(ared), rel.(ating or relative), resp.(ecting), rev.(ised or revision), roy.(al), sci.(ence), sel.(ected or selection), ser.(ies), S. S. (Sunday school), temp.(erance), tr.(anslator or translated).

Bible.

Note. The following entries are limited to those which, according to the publisher's record, present individual characteristics. Works upon the Bible (including commentaries with or without text) will be found in the general alphabet under names of authors or compilers,—only those in which the notes seem clearly subordinate to the text being placed here. Short selections are also entered under the names of compilers, or under title. In the subject index of the Catalogue all such selections and works upon the Bible will be found under the subject Bible.

The arrangement adopted is: Whole Bible, complete, abridged, selections; Old Testament, its separate parts in Bible order; New Testament, Gospels (collective, harmonies, individual gospels), Acts, Epistles; Apocrypha, its separate parts. Under these the sub-arrangement by language is: English (authorized, revised, Catholic or Douay, other versions), original tongues, original tongues and English, foreign tongues.
